

Bio

I've been living in Rhode Island since 1967, happily single for quite a while. I moved here with my family because it seemed so much like the Long Island of my childhood, open areas: farm land, wild places and sea shore. Having learned in Civics that RI was the "most densely populated state in the union", coming from NY, I could only imagine that people lived atop each other. Living here has been a wonderful surprise.

I enjoy my garden (I've become a 'Master Gardener' and a 'Tree Steward'), go to a writing group and a class in watercolor weekly. I've discovered a passion for Dixieland jazz, which I indulge in whenever possible, including two summer weekend festivals in nearby CT. All of these activities have brought me friends with whom to enjoy them.

Amazing to me, I have become a Nautilus addict and even taught personal fitness at the local Y.

My son and his wife live nearby and I'm glad to have a close relationship with them. We share holidays together and swap yard work and other chores. I have 'grand kitties' not grand kiddies.

I continue working part time as a psychotherapist and a personal organizer, and don't expect to retire. I can fit my work schedule around my life.

I'm grateful for close friends and the depth of relationship we've shared for many years. They make my life very rich.

Despite having lived in Ri for over forty years I still consider myself a New Yorker. I spend a wonderful summer weekend in the city every year with my niece and love keeping the connection. It will be fun to be in Forest Hills for our 50th!
